POSES AS A THROAT CUTTER.

Does "De Boss of De Emegrashun," at a Soldier's Monument Meeting.

A special from Indianapolis under date of March 17, 1895, gives the following account of the closing act of the State Soldiers' Monument Commission:

The closing hours of the life of the State Soldiers' Monument Commission, which passed out of existence last week to be succeeded by a regency, were characterized by one of the most sensational episodes that ever occurred in the State capitol, for, though wanting in the number of actors that took part in the disgraceful riot in which Private Secretary King was so brutally assaulted, the lack of numbers was more than compensated for in the prominence of the actors in the drama which bordered close upon a tragedy. William H. English, who is known to the people of the country as the vice presidential candidate of the Democratic party on the Hancock ticket of 1880, has been a member of the monument commission for two years, while George J. Langsdale, a well-known Grand Army man, has been a member and President of the commission since it was established by act of the Legislature in 1887. It was no secret that English and Langsdale differed radically on many of the questions that entered into the adornment of the monument and, especially, on the question of removing the dates from the monument shaft which commemorated the Mexican war period, a period marking a brilliant succession of victories in which Indiana soldiers participated and adding territory of infinite wealth to the possessions of the Union. The dates had been placed on the shaft before Mr. English became a member of the commission; Gov. Matthews had indorsed their appropriateness in his inaugural address, and the Democratic Legislature, though petitioned by the Grand Army to do so, had refused to order the dates removed.

Strangely enough, Mr. English, a Democrat, favored the removal of the dates, and Mr. Langsdale, a Republican and a Grand Army man, favored their retention, holding that the monument should be broad enough in its scope to commemorate the heroism of the Indiana soldiery regardless of the fields of battle where that heroism had been displayed. The views of Mr. English prevailed, and the Mexican dates were removed from the shaft. The friction thus engendered continued to manifest itself in all the acts of the Commission, and, though maintaining a polite exterior when thrown together in the meetings of the Commission, it was plain that the presence of each on the board was exceedingly distasteful to the other. Matters moved along in this rugged groove till after the Legislature met and the bill for the appointment of a regency was discussed and introduced, but the antipathy of the two men to each other showed no diminution.

When on the eve of ending their official existence a dispute arose as usual over some matter in relation to the work. Hot words followed, and English stooped down by the side of the desk, and as he rose held in his hand a large stone which had been brought to the office as a sample of that which entered into the construction of the monument. In a moment Langsdale was on his feet with a pocket-knife open in his hand. He stood trembling for an instant, when, with the suddenness and agility of a cat, he sprang over the desk and grabbed English by the lapel of his coat, and with upraised knife glared into his eyes prepared to strike at any moment. Mr. English backed away, and Langsdale followed him up and held the knife aloft, while he kept one eye upon the rock in the hand of his antagonist.

"What do you mean?" asked English, hoarse with excitement. "Put down that rock or I'll show you what I mean," replied Langsdale, his wily form trembling with rage, and his eyes gleaming like coals of fire. "Put down that knife, then," retorted English. "Drop that rock. I say," yelled the now thoroughly aroused Langsdale, and at the same moment the knife blade came down on a line parallel to the throat of Mr. English.

For a moment the two men stood and glared at each other with the ferocity of tigers. Then the hand that grasped the rock relaxed its hold and the stone fell with a sharp sound to the floor. As the stone fell from the hand of Mr. English, Langsdale released his hold upon the lapel of the gentlemen's coat, and, turning ing to his desk, he fell exhausted into his chair, so terrible had been the strain of the few moments' excitement under which he labored. In having an open knife in his hand and in being so close to Mr. English, Langsdale possessed a decided advantage, for, while it would have been impossible for English to throw the stone with great effect at such short range, Langsdale could use his knife to certain and deadly purpose. That he would have done so there is no doubt, but the incident happily terminated without bloodshed, and the causes of friction have been removed by abolishing the commission.

Not on the Menu.

One of the Pan-Thug invitations for last Friday night is said to have been sent by some one to a Theolog, who is reported a foot- and base-baller and a good fellow. He thought it a little queer that a bid to the Pan Thug should reach him, but he braced himself for the occasion by donning corset, skirts and frock; he blacked his face and curled his hair, put on a red bandana turban, and effected an early appearance at the Thug blow out. He felt a little nervous because of lack of acquaintance and also because of the sex of his surroundings, but he kept shy of those who appeared to be too inquisitive until finally suspicion was aroused. Little Billee, the Laird, or some other girl reported the suspicious to some other girl, and so suspicion flew from one to another until finally the Theolog was surrounded and the Thugs in authority asked for a bill of particulars. The Theolog would not particularize, but he did want to get away. He began a masterly retreat, when told by his interviewers to "git," with his face to the enemy. He desired to secure his wraps, which he had deposited in one of the rooms for safety, but the order to "git" was of the rapid sort, and no side tracking was allowed. Saturday, the word was that the Theolog had been dismissed from the University, but later intelligence is that he was reprimanded and instructed to forgo skirts, corsets, bangs, burnt cork and Pan Thug banquets in the future.

A Fatal Accident.

On Thursday of last week Mrs. Harvey Wilson, of Floyd township, met with an accident that resulted in her death on the following Saturday. As the report comes to us the clothing of the deceased caught on fire from the fire-place, and she was enveloped in flames almost immediately. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Baker, who was present, attempted to smother the flames with some woolen clothing, but without avail, as her clothing was almost entirely consumed, and the cruel fire burned over almost the entire surface of her body. Her sufferings were most terrible, and death, which occurred on Saturday morning, was undoubtedly a great relief to her. The funeral took place on Sunday, Elder Brown conducting the services. Deceased was a daughter of Absalom Clark, of Washington township, and been married only a few months. The family have the sincere sympathy of a host of friends in their great bereavement.

Surgical Operation.

On Tuesday Drs. Dunning, of Indianapolis, and Lammers and Evans of this city performed the surgical operation necessary for the removal of a large malignant tumor from the breast of Mrs. James Riley Weaver, of this city. The operation was a complete success and the patient, it is hoped, will speedily recover from all ill-effects thereof.

William Henry Cowgill died at his late residence, in Marion township, on March 19, of disease of the lungs, after a long sickness borne with Christian fortitude and resignation. Deceased was one of the much respected and greatly honored residents of the eastern portion of Putnam county—a good neighbor, a firm friend a loving husband, and a kind father—he will be missed and mourned by the stricken wife and children, and the host of friends who knew and loved him.

A citizen asks us by letter: "Will City Attorney Moore have an ordinance passed incorporating the provisions of the Moore Bill regulating the sale of liquor?" We give it up; the question is too hard for us to answer. One of the city councilmen says that no such ordinance will be passed by the city council; that there is only one of the city dads in favor of such an ordinance.

Shoes That Are Desirable.

I have recently had made a line of shoes especially adapted to the wear of the school girls. They are made of very fine soft calf, spring heel, double sole, with patent leather tips and a narrow, square toe. They are nice and stylish, and at the same time warm and durable. "Just the thing," you will say when you see them.

I have an old ladies' lace shoe of the same kind, made with a flexible bottom, that is unusually good.

Balmorals or lace shoes are growing in favor, in misses' and women's fine shoes. You can't help being pleased when you see what nice ones we have.

The prices are so reasonable, too; you will wonder how we can afford it. If you want nice shoes and good ones; shoes that fit well, look well, wear well, and hold their shape well, by all means buy those that are custom made. That is the kind that I keep, and the only kind that can be relied on to give satisfaction. You will find at my store such shoes as are sure to please you in style, quality and price.

Respectfully,
P. R. CHRISTIE.

CHAPTER VII.

(Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.)

CHAPTER I.

Langford finds Philip Davaris a Greek violinist. In New York after the latter has been on a mysterious journey. Finds a telegram dated Paris: "Come at once. Important discoveries. Helene." Who is Helene? The two friends go to Lenox later. Davaris's strange agitation at meeting a society girl, Gladys Montague.

CHAPTER II.

Two society men, Ned Lawrence and Thurston meet Davaris at the country house of Mrs. Hamlyn at Lenox. Lawrence's flirtation with Constance Hamlyn. Miss Montague shows Davaris a picture. "That man your father?" he says and is strangely excited. After Davaris's departure the picture is gone.

CHAPTER III.

Thurston and Havermeier get lost while hunting and take refuge in the house of an old hermit in the mountains. Davaris's name mentioned. The old man charges the young fellows to tell Davaris: "Come to me as fast as a horse can bring you."

CHAPTER IV.

Thurston and Havermeier wake in the morning and find Westley dead. Havermeier takes a "kodak" of him. Seth Dowe's story of the hermit and his elegance and breeding when he first came to the woods long ago. Seth mails a packet given him by Westley addressed: Philip Davaris, Paris.

CHAPTER V.

Davaris suspected of stealing the picture. He comes out from the house in a strange manner and finds Gladys. She is puzzled at this. Havermeier gives Davaris the hermit's message. "Did you ever know a man by the name of Cyrus Westley?" Davaris repeats in a dazed tone: "Cyrus Westley."

CHAPTER VI.

Davaris recognizes the picture Havermeier took of the dead Westley as that of a man he knew when a boy in Greece. Davaris plays on the violin to Gladys. He is about to propose to her and acting strangely leaves hurriedly.

Ned Lawrence did not find the dinner party he attended that evening very entertaining. It was a stag dinner, or very nearly so, for the one lady present was the mother of the younger son of the house which was entertaining.

They were left to themselves over their wine, and the motion, "Shall we join the ladies?" never came, for the old lady retired promptly at half after nine each night. The men began to talk horse, over their cigars, of the recent "Suburban," and how the despised horse, unheard of and unthought of, in connection with the "Queen of the Turf" had won in June.

Lawrence did not care for that sort of thing now. The only recollection of the races he had was of a hot dusty day, a long-suffering crowd, and finally a dash of rain to ruin the hats and gowns of the woman, and also complete the ruin of the ruin of their tempers. Lawrence had in truth been in the thick of it, and had lost a good deal of money on the favorite, but he had lost it like a man and well—he did not care for these things now.

She had taught him to think of other things and live for other things. The racing was all very well in its way, and quite the proper thing to talk about, but to him the stories of the great race were old. And when young Havermeier lighted his second cigar and began to tell the story of "When I was in Canada last spring, don't you know, I caught a trout weighing exactly—" Lawrence thought it was about time for him to go.

He was very sorry to leave so early, as he had spent a very pleasant evening, at least he told his host so, but it was with a feeling of great relief that he found himself in the open air. It was long before the time he had ordered a carriage, so he started to walk up the road briskly. It was a rather long distance back to the cottage and the hour grew late as he approached.

The night was warm, although there was a breeze from the southeast, and Lawrence unbuttoned his coat and took off his hat to let the wind cool his heated head. He felt that something had sent him away from the dinner-party. A feeling vague and undefined came over him that Gladys wanted him, or what was much more to the point he wanted Gladys. It was during the solitary walk that a resolve shaped itself in his mind that he could not sleep that night until he knew whether she loved him or not. He felt strangely happy as he walked along the road. It did not seem that he knew exactly where he was. Everything was strange and unreal—the twinkling lights in the cottages about him, the roads and the laws here and there that he had known almost from his boyhood. The road stretched out before him like a gray path, and he idly wondered if he knew after all where it was leading him, and it seemed that he had never been on it before.

He remembered dimly seeing carriages pass by, the lamps gleaming on the road, and once when he stood for a moment under a street lamp, he remembered how some woman had nodded cordially to him from a passing brougham. Then he reached the cottage and silently entered the hall. As he stood for a moment near the door he was conscious of a strange feeling. He did not know what it was, but coming from a room near at hand was strange music that found an echo in his heart and made him stop in his tracks, with his hand on the knob, and listen. The tones came like the far away sound of waves beating on the shore and then grew louder until Lawrence felt tempted to put his hands to his ears to keep out the sound. The house was quiet as death and so the sound of footsteps stealing along the hallway were more readily distinguished.

A woman was coming along the hall and paused before the half open door-way. She did not see Lawrence for her back was partly turned toward him; but as she came from a passage way he had obtained a view of her face and had seen her flashing black eyes. The face reminded him of someone's face, but then he could not think whose. It did not seem like a woman's face and there was a look on it that frightened Lawrence. It was a set determined look and to him as she crouched near the door, it seemed that she was like a panther ready to spring. Lawrence did not remember ever seeing the woman before in the house, but she was dressed as a maid and laughing to himself for his strange fancies, he sprang up the stairs. She was very likely one of the servants attracted by the music which had for one moment enthralled Lawrence. He broke the spell and went to his room. He didn't stay there very long, for it made him uneasy to think of Gladys down there with those people, and besides he wanted a chance to speak to her on the subject uppermost in his mind.

He lighted a cigarette, and holding it in his hand again went down stairs. The woman in the hall was gone and in the room there was silence. He turned toward it and then paused. He felt that his hand was shaking and that he could hear the beating of his heart tumultuously. He leaned against the banisters with his side against the rail, and every time his heart beat he could feel the motion in the slight yielding of his body. Now that the time for him to put it to the test had come, he felt weak, and yielded to the temptation to go out of doors and smoke for a few moments. He wondered if that feeling of weakness was a common failing of lovers, and he wondered if he really was in love or whether he had been playing with edged tools and had been out. If she loved him, all well and good, if she didn't, then it was England and the continent, or Africa—anywhere his paper would send him, outside of America. He didn't ask for much. It was only to be gone six months; then he would return and if necessary meet Gladys day after day in society and no one would dream that there had been anything between them, and if such a thing had been suspected no one would think it serious.

He sank into a low chair on the piazza and elevated his feet on the rail. It was very quiet except for the singing of the crickets by the hedge and the occasional cry from a dog or some animal in the distance. Then Lawrence heard a voice and a crunching of gravel on the walk. He saw a figure of a woman step from a side door and saw a man come from behind a bit of scrubby. They did not know it, but a light from a window streamed full upon them, and Lawrence saw Davaris, the weird violinist, and the woman who had been crouching at the door.

He lingered and heard the woman's clear voice reply.

They walked near him, evidently thinking the piazza unoccupied and in so remote a corner of the house, perhaps with a view to taking possession of it themselves. Lawrence brought his feet down from the rail at once and started up. He thought he would go away, but the man was talking angrily to his companion, and it seemed that he was threatening the woman. Lawrence did not care to become an eavesdropper, yet at the same time he was not the man to run away and leave a woman in any sort of danger.

"Helene," the man was saying. "Oh, why did you do it? Why did you come? Why didn't you stay away as I told you? You don't know what you have done, and you have made me angry."

It was not so much the words themselves but the cold, calmly angry way in which they were spoken that made Lawrence know what they meant. He lingered and heard the woman's clear voice reply:

"I know what you have done. I know you have fallen in love with the woman. It is something you have no right to do. I warned you, and you did not heed the warning. Philip Davaris you know why I came. You know what you must do. You know that you must go away."

It all seemed plain to Lawrence then. Davaris was a man who had some connection with this servant, a man who carried on a low affair with this woman, yet dared to love Gladys Montague. He had difficulty in holding himself back, but a feeling came upon him to leap the railing at once and confront the Greek and accuse him of this.

"There is some great mistake, I feel convinced, Helen. And I know now what you mean when you say I must go away, and that I know what I must do. Oh, I cannot do it!" There was a note of sorrow in his voice, but Lawrence in his excitement totally failed to observe it.

"It seems to me that you grow more chicken hearted as you grow older," said the woman with a sneer. "When you were in Greece, you were not so scrupulous."

"Do something!" muttered Lawrence under his breath. Some plan for robbery evidently. He must look into this.

"You are a Greek," she continued. "I am a Greek. These years you have spent in this country have made you turn into an American. You do not remember your duty to your dead father. Instead what do you do? Look at me if you can while I tell you. You fall in love with a woman, you are crazy after her, you play to her on a violin, you look into her eyes and utter her name. It is then that you see me, it is then that you remember everything, and you drop your violin and come to me. Before you leave me to-night I shall make you promise—"

They came near the piazza and evidently seeing that some one was already there, or perhaps smelling Lawrence's cigarette smoke, they continued on their way down the walk leaving a very much perplexed man on the piazza.

It didn't take him long to make up his mind that something very much to the disadvantage of Gladys was being concocted. And he wondered how he was to let her know of it. He couldn't very well march up to Gladys, or Mrs. Hamlyn, for that matter, and blandly say, "This man, your guest at dinner this evening, is now having a clandestine meeting with a servant girl. They are planning something very much to your disadvantage in some way. I tell you this that you may know what to do to thwart them. Cut this man Davaris and discharge your servant at once."

This, of course, was what he would have liked to have done, but on serious thought he reflected that it might be taking a good deal for granted, and Gladys would think that his jealousy had made him slightly crazy on this question of Davaris, and his attention to the said young woman. At any rate he resolved that he must keep a good watch on the actions of the Greek. Of course he did not mean to play the spy or anything of that sort, but if anything came under his notice, like the evening's episode, for example, he would make the most of it.

The man was an adventurer, without doubt, and it was his duty to expose him as soon as possible. The woman, well, the woman was quite another matter, and might be his wife, or his confederate, or something of that sort. It was clearly Lawrence's duty to open his eyes and look about.

And then his thoughts went back to Gladys. It seemed very odd that a man should be surrounded by so much mystery and should allow himself to be entangled with such a strange man, a foreigner, and a man of much different ideas and much different purposes from hers. It surprised Lawrence a good deal, for he thought she knew better than that.

But after all, who really knows a girl's mind?

She doesn't always know it herself. It seemed to Lawrence a half hour, but it was really but five minutes that he sat on the piazza thinking of these things. Did he not owe it to Gladys to tell her what he had seen that night, but even if he did tell her would she believe it? Then he arose quickly and entered the house again, resolving to find her. If she accepted him, then it would be time enough for him to tell her, and if she rejected him—why then she might take care of herself.

A rather selfish way to look at things, but with a very human, and Lawrence was human.

In the hall he met Thurston.

"Well, how is it?" asked the latter.

"What?" replied Lawrence, staring.

"Oh—things," returned Thurston.

"Well, I don't know," replied Lawrence.

"To tell the truth, I suppose I might as well tell you, I may go away to-night and I may stay. It's got to come to-night, and I'll be hanged if a girl rejects me if I'll stay in the same house another hour. If anything should happen, old fellow, mind you, and I should go away suddenly, back me up for all you are worth. Tell the people next morning that I am subject to these attacks; that I usually leave a place that way; that I had a sudden call on business; that I received a telegram informing me of the death of a very rich relative—in fact anything. And, Thurston, I mean this, have an eye out for that Greek."

"Who do you mean? Oh, Davaris. I saw him not a quarter of an hour ago making tracks for the hotel as fast as he could leg it. Looked sort of done up about something and didn't speak to me as he went by. I don't mind that, for I don't think much of him, as I have told you before. As for the other matter you don't go at it in the right way. 'Faint heart,' and all that sort of thing, you know. If you can win a fair lady do it in a manly way and don't cringe about and hem and haw, but get right down to business."

"Haven't you got a book on 'How to Pop the Question; or, Proposals and Proposing?'" laughed Lawrence, nervously. "I sort of wish it was over. Well, old fellow, shake hands once for luck, and here goes."

The two friends who had carried this conversation on by the foot of the staircase in an undertone gripped their hands heartily together, and Lawrence clung to Thurston's large palm as if he didn't dare to let go. Then he turned away and went silently down the hall.

Thurston looked after him and took a pipe from his pocket. He went out on the piazza and began filling it. His hands trembled somewhat, and then he looked towards the doorway from which the light streamed out on the piazza. "Another poor fool!" he muttered. "Another poor fool!"

Standard Dictionary.

The publication of the Standard Dictionary, published by Funk & Wagnalls, places before the reading world a work that, for many reasons, is deserving of more than a passing mention. In the first place, it is the very latest publication in a field in which we have already the Century, Webster's, Worcester's, the Imperial, and Stormonth, not to mention smaller and more special works. Being the latest, it has of course had the advantage of the work that has been done by its predecessors. In the next place, a book of this kind, in the very nature of the case, must have claims to serious consideration, or its publishers would not have ventured to risk a million dollars in its production. A careful examination of the book, and a comparison of it page by page and at different points of test with the Century and Webster's, its two principal competitors, proves that the most conclusive and convincing manner that its merits amply justify its entrance into a field that to an untrained observer might seem to be already filled. The special points wherein this book clearly outranks its competitors may be more clearly indicated by presenting them categorically.

The Standard has a vocabulary of more than 300,000 words, by actual count, as against 225,000 in the Century, 125,000 in the Imperial (Webster's), 105,000 in Worcester's, and 50,000 in Stormonth's. This increase of 75,000 words over a dictionary published so recently as the first named of these, indicates much more than an increase in the number of words. It indicates a more complete and more accurate representation of the language as it is actually used. The Standard has been ransacked for its unrecorded important terms and phrases, and the result is a list of words which are comparatively few in number, but which have been added to the list of words which have been entered and described. It means, too, that the Standard is a dictionary of the words which are actually used in the language, and not a dictionary of the words which are merely possible. The Standard has been gathered together and adequately explained; the words which are actually used in the language, and not a dictionary of the words which are merely possible. The Spring is your most dangerous time!

Get your blood pure and your nerves strong.

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy,

Guaranteed Purely Vegetable and Harmless, IS THE GREATEST AND BEST

Spring Medicine!

Are You Prepared for Spring?

It is necessary to prepare yourself for the advent of spring by taking a spring medicine. Use the remedy which cured S. W. Nourse, Esq., of Hudson, Mass.

"From constant worry over business matters," he said, "I suffered from the loss of sleep, and became so nervous that I was entirely unfitted for my business. In fact, I feared insanity. I used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. The effect was almost magical. I could again sleep, mental composure, appetite, and strength returned. Six bottles of this remedy cured me, and I have remained well to this date. I have recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to many of my friends and neighbors, and have yet to learn of a failure to obtain good results."

He was Cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Everybody Should Take a Spring Medicine.

Read this and You Will Know What to Use.

Mrs. Elmer Craig, of LeRoy, Ill., tells you how you can be well and strong:

"I was stricken with nervous disease," she says, "which affected my heart, head, and stomach. I doctored with physicians of our town, but got no relief from the terrible sick headaches, pains in the heart and stomach until I used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Before I used this wonderful medicine the nerves in my eyes were so affected that I feared that I would lose my sight. I would get so nervous and weak I could not walk across the room without terrible palpitation of the heart. I had not taken one bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy before my head and eyes were cleared of their dull aching, and I am growing stronger every day. I cannot do half justice in the praise of this medicine."

Do You Feel Weak, Tired, and Nervous?

The wonderful cure of Mrs. Oliver Wilson, of Northboro, Mass., will interest you.

"I was suffering from nervousness," she says, "caused by female weakness and nervous prostration. I was so nervous and weak I could not go up a common pair of stairs without stopping to rest, and was troubled to sleep at night. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and have obtained my old elastic step around the house, to the surprise of my friends. After creeping around for two years, hardly able to do anything, it has proved a boon to me truly. I know of many others whom it has cured and who speak most highly in praise of it."

Is Your Blood Pure, Are Your Nerves Strong?

Mr. Seth E. Parsons, of 22 Park St., Albany, N. Y., one of Albany's most prominent business men, states:

"I was very nervous. I could not hold my hands still, especially my left hand; there was an involuntary contraction of the muscles and movement of the fingers. My food troubled me very soon after eating. My kidneys and bladder were affected so it was difficult to urinate freely. I used the celebrated medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and without being tedious reciting my experience, I can say that these difficulties have left me, and my nerves are quiet and my food does not distress me. I feel without hesitation in saying that I think Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has produced these favorable results."

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy Cured Him.

From Indianapolis the word comes that if there was anything about the Legislative halls that has not been carried away it is because it was too bulky to be moved or was nailed down. Three large lamps, all the stationery, pens, pencils, ink, erasers, waste baskets, etc., have disappeared. Five heavy porcelain cuspidors are gone.

Most of the twenty-seven sets of Burnes' statutes purchased at the beginning of the session have been stolen. A number of books, the private property of different members, are missing. Lieutenant Gov. Nye lost a lot of personal property, including a copy of Roberts' rules, a fine paper cutter, an onyx ink-stand and a silk umbrella. A reporter had his rubbers confiscated. But the clock still hangs on the wall, and the large chandeliers are attached to the ceiling yet.

Of course, no one knows who took these things, but it was noticeable that the members themselves went out with heavy packages, and some of them had large boxes expressed to their homes.

It was found that every drinking glass and one water cooler were gone, and that the water had been emptied from the other. Even the brass chains were taken from some of the curtains.

Members who were here two years ago declare that more property was taken this session than ever before.

Entered at the Postoffice, Greencastle, Ind., as second-class mail matter.

We want a good correspondent at each postoffice in Putnam county. Those now acting as correspondents will please notify us when they are out of supplies of any kind and we will forward the same to them promptly.

The law against winter racing in this State has taken Harrison off the track, but he will be in the presidential preliminary canters early in May.

It is now in order for the Supreme Court of Indiana to knock out the Republican gerrymander of the State. Let the matter be attended to at an early day.

THEY have invented a new word in the Northwest; it is "whozee" and it is meant to describe and express the state of the weather when the thermometer marks 30 degrees or more below zero, and the air is so calm and still that naught seems to move that does not belong to the animate order of things.

THE failure of the legislature to pass the bill to suppress prize fighting in Indiana is accounted for by the fact that the Republican members wanted to indulge in a prize fight of their own, at the close of the session. A fight to the finish between Corbett and Fitzsimmons would be far more respectable than the rough-and-tumble melee indulged in by the Republican members of the legislature on that occasion.

THE question as to where the next Democratic and Republican National Conventions will be held is already receiving attention, and the people of San Francisco, and in fact of the whole State of California, are making a strong pull to have the Republican Convention held in San Francisco. All sorts of inducements will be held out, and the possibilities are that the convention will be held there. St. Louis is setting the pins to have the Democratic convention held in that city.

THERE is an evolution in progress in church affairs, and it has just been made very prominent in Boston, where one of the large congregations has just built a new parsonage for its pastor. This new domicile for the preacher has, in addition to the usual parlors, dining room, kitchen and bedrooms, rooms fitted up with gymnasium fixtures, with billiard and pool tables, and with the run and balls of a bowling alley. The garret of the residence is finished as an amusement hall, with stage, footlights, scenery, etc.

THE season of year is at hand when it behooves householders to renovate and clean up about their premises. The highway to health is cleanliness.

THE new pork packing season has more than met expectations so far. About 100,000 more hogs have been packed since the 1st of March than were during the first half of March last year—a gain of 21 per cent.

THE Governor of Indiana is now enjoying well earned rest—for several days before the final adjournment of the Legislature he was well nigh worn out writing veto messages on the laws passed by the fool legislature.

ABSOLUTE proof that free trade would extend American commerce to the end of the world is given in a report from Claude Meeker, Consul at Bradford. He says that woolen cloth manufactured in the United States is being sold in England at prices that astonish the British manufacturers and merchants.

THE 20 years service of Judge Holman in Congress causes him to make public his opinion that there is no money in politics—he leaves Congress a poorer man than when he was when he began his first term. Holman forgets that there is a difference in men; John Sherman entered Congress a poor man, he has stuck to Congressional life as long as Holman, and he is now a millionaire.

THERE can be no successful denial that the appropriations of the Reed Congress aggregated $1,035,650,000. It cannot be denied that the Fifty-third Congress held appropriations down to $990,000,000, in spite of the sugar bounty and liberal allowance for new warships; in spite, also, of the continuing obligations laid upon the Government by the Reed Congress. Democratic economy is not an empty phrase.

JUST at present the question of finance overshadows all else. Other subjects at one time uppermost are not now mentioned. It is all finance. A great subject, too, one over which great men disagree. But other subjects are not dead. They are simply lying dormant. The tariff at the proper time will again demand attention. When the clouds roll by it will be found that the democratic policy is the right one; that a reduction of the tariff rates, means greater business for the country, cheaper goods for the masses, and at the same time good prices for the manufacturer, who, instead of being satisfied with reasonable profits has wanted simply fabulous profits on his products.

ONE of the arguments used by the Republicans in the last campaign was the extravagance of the last two or three Indiana Legislatures. All the changes were rung—useless employes while the legislature was in session, extra pay appropriations, etc. The Republicans have now had control of one Indiana Legislature, and they have made a record of expenses, and a comparison shows that the last three Democratic legislatures cost the State, on an average, about $85,000 each; the Republican legislature which closed last week costs the State $112,000. The Republicans appropriated $100,000 for Legislative expenses; this amount has all been paid out and there are warrants issued for about $12,000 more, which the holders cannot realize on until the next Legislature makes an appropriation to pay them.

MUCH has been recently said in regard to the action of the French Government against the importation of American beef cattle into France, and effort has been made to pull down the price of cattle because of this action. The figures show there is nothing in the scare. France and Germany together bought only 24,000 head from us last year, as compared with 385,794 taken by Great Britain and Ireland. The purchases of France alone amounted to 14,540 head, for which she paid not quite $1,200,000. This is a pretty large sum and yet it is only 3 per cent of our total receipts from cattle sold to Europe last year. Notwithstanding the loss of Germany's patronage in the early part of November, we had a bigger foreign trade in cattle last year than in 1893. There was, in fact, an enormous increase—75 per cent. In money it amounted to about $16,000,000 and it is interesting to find that $15,000,000 of the gain came from the United Kingdom. We hope to recover our lost trade with both France and Germany, but there will be no occasion for despondency even if the effort is not successful. Those countries will feel the loss a great deal more than the United States.

HUNDREDS DROWNED.

Recovery of the Wreck of the Reina Regente.

Soul of the 420 Persons on Board Is Left to Tell the Story of the Disaster—It Is Said She Was Unseaworthy.

CADIZ, March 20.—The Spanish cruiser, Alfonso XII., has returned here after searching for the missing cruiser, Reina Regente, and reports having found the latter vessel sunk near Bajo Aceitanos, not far from the straits of Gibraltar. Only 20 inches of the Reina Regente's masts showed above water.

To Recover Bodies of the Crew. The Alfonso XII. has returned to the scene of the wreck with a number of divers and diving appliances in order to recover the bodies of the crew of the missing ship.

The Reina Regente was reported missing March 13. She had just conveyed from Cadiz to Tangier the returning Moorish mission to Spain. The cruiser left Tangier March 10 for Cadiz and her location has not been definitely ascertained until Tuesday. Pieces of one of her boats and flags were reported to have been picked up along the shore near Ceuta and Tarifa. She carried a crew of 420 officers and men and all are believed to have perished.

As soon as the reports of the disaster became current a number of Spanish and British warships put to sea in search of her. The Spanish cruisers, Isla de Luzon and Alfonso XII. returned to Cadiz, after having searched the Spanish and African coasts and the straits, without any news of the missing warship.

Her Armament Too Heavy. Deputy Diaz Moreau, who was formerly an officer in the Spanish navy, in the chamber of deputies during the evening of March 14 read the statement of a former commander of the Reina Regente, in which the writer described the cruiser as a vessel unable to weather a heavy storm, owing to the increased weight of her armament.

Excitement in Spain. The uncertainty as to the fate of the Reina Regente caused great public excitement in Madrid, and the government was accused of keeping back news of the ship and of having ordered the detention by the censors of all telegrams giving information about her. But when a number of flags, a compass box and other wreckage known to have belonged to the Reina Regente were washed ashore at Tarifa she was given up for lost. In Cadiz and Cartagena, where most of the 420 officers and men of the lost cruiser belonged, there has been great anxiety and excitement from the moment she was reported missing.

She Visited New York. The Reina Regente, about two years ago, visited New York as one of the Spanish squadron which escorted across the Atlantic the Columbus caravels.

Dr. Carey, who has been attending him, states that it will be a week yet before Mr. King is able to be out. It is stated that when he is able to appear, Mr. King will go before the grand jury, and tell who it was that incited the riot, and who prevented the governor's messenger from performing his duties. Judge McCray, of the criminal court, denies the statement attributed to him that he will call the attention of the grand jury to the matter. Judge McCray states that he will call the attention of the grand jury to general infractions of the criminal law, but does not deem it necessary to refer to any offenses specifically.

In the boxes are agricultural implements, firearms, ammunition, household utensils and supplies, clothing, etc.

When the vessel's lines were cast off there was a cheer from the crowd on the wharves and the emigrants sang their parting song: "I'm Going Home to Africa's Shores." The refrain was taken up by those on shore and the singing kept up until the vessel passed the city, and the crowd following along the wharves shouting good-bys, while from the negroes gathered on the crowded deck of the steamship came back answering shouts, and the color-bearer of the party, a sturdy negro, violently waved a large American flag that will be displayed as the Horsa enters the harbor of Monrovia. The Horsa expects to reach Monrovia about April 1, and, after landing the emigrants, will endeavor to secure a return cargo.

March April May

Are the Best Months in Which to

Purify Your Blood

And the Best Blood Purifier is

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Which Purifies, Vitalizes and Enriches the Blood.

At this season everyone should take a good spring medicine. Your blood must be purified or you will be neglecting your health. There is a cry from Nature for help, and unless there is prompt and satisfactory response you will be liable to serious illness.

This demand can only be met by the purifying, enriching and Blood-Vitalizing elements to be found in Hood's Sarsaparilla. That this is the best medicine for you to take is proven by the fact that it has the largest sales and accomplishes the greatest cures of any medicine in the world. It purifies the blood, creates an appetite, builds up the nervous system and renovates the entire body. Do not be induced to buy anything else. Insist upon HOOD'S.

A Boy's Life Saved.

"I cannot praise Hood's Sarsaparilla enough for what it has done for my boy. Some four years ago, when six years old, George was attacked by hip disease in his right leg. We had to get him a pair of crutches, with which he was able to move about, but became badly deformed. We had to have his right leg lanced just above the knee. In a few weeks a second sore broke out, both discharging freely. Agonizing pains afflicted him, he could not bear to be moved, his growth was stopped and in a short time he has a mere skeleton. He had no appetite, and it was hard work to make him eat enough to keep him alive. A few weeks later we had his hip lanced, and following this five other eruptions broke out, making eight running sores in all. We did all we could for him, but he grew weaker every day, although we had three of the best physicians. As a last resort we were prevailed upon by relatives who had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla with beneficial results to give the medicine a trial. We got one bottle about the first of March, and he had taken the medicine only a few days when his appetite began to improve. When he had taken one bottle he could move about a little with his crutches, which he had not been able to use for the preceding three months. We continued faithfully with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in six months he was and go about the house without the crutches. He has now taken Hood's Sarsaparilla regularly for eighteen months, and for the past six months has been without the crutches, which he has outgrown by several inches. The sores have all healed with the exception of one which is rapidly closing, only the scars and an occasional limp remaining as reminders of his suffering. Hood's Sarsaparilla in his case has truly done wonders, and he is daily gaining in flesh and good color. He runs about and plays as lively as any child. We feel an inexpressible joy at having our boy restored to health and we always speak in the highest terms of Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. HENRY W. MURPHY, Exeter, N. H.

"My mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Wolfe, at the age of 72 years, was attacked with a violent form of salt rheum; it spread all over her body, and her hands and limbs were dreadful to look at. At the same time, my little daughter Clara, who was just one year old, was attacked by a similar disease, like scrofula. It appeared in under each side of her neck; had the attendance of the family physician and other doctors for a long time, but seemed to grow worse. I read of many people cured of scrofula by Hood's Sarsaparilla. As soon as we gave Hood's Sarsaparilla to Clara, she began to get better, and before the first bottle was gone, the sores entirely healed up and there has never been any sign of the disease since. She is a Healthy Robust Child.

Her grandmother took Hood's Sarsaparilla at the same time, and the salt rheum decreased in its violence and a perfect cure was soon effected. It took about three months for her cure, and she ascribes her good health and strength at her advanced age to Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has certainly been a Godsend to my family." Mrs. SOPHIA WOLFE, Zaleski, Ohio.

THURSTON MAY GO.

Hawaiian Minister Said to Have Given Grave Offense.

A Well-Defined Rumor That the New Republic Has Been Notified That His Recall Would Please This Government.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Intimations have been made in general by well-informed circles for some days past to the effect that Mr. Thurston, the Hawaiian minister, has not been altogether persona grata to the ruling authorities in Washington, but so guarded have these suggestions been and so reticent are all prominent officials who have been spoken to on the subject that no basis for a public assertion of them could be obtained from any proper authority. That the relations between the representative of Hawaii and the secretary of state have seemed somewhat strained of late appeared very evident to those who have given close attention to that phase of the situation; but even this had not taken a shape to warrant a positive assertion as coming from unquestionable authority that the official presence of Minister Thurston was no longer desirable in Washington.

Positive public official utterance on the matter of this government's request for Mr. Thurston's recall is not forthcoming at this moment; but enough is known to justify the assertion that such request has been made and the impression is prevalent that a correspondence between the department and the minister actuated the demand and hastens a request for its early compliance. While consistent with the reticence maintained at the state department in this matter, no public reference to the causes of the unpleasant character of the relations between government officials and the minister can be evolved, there are some that express the opinion that several very frank and emphatic remarks that have from time to time been dropped by the Hawaiian minister have not been regarded as strictly within the line of a dignified propriety, and this opinion goes far in placing a reason for the action of the department.

WORK OF BRUTES.

They Lynch a Nebraska Woman After Shamefully Mistreating Her.

OMAHA, Neb., March 19.—News of a terrible tragedy has just reached this place. It occurred last Thursday in Keya Paha county, near Brooksbury.

Mrs. W. E. Holton, who was living alone on her farm, was taken from her bed, cruelly outraged and then lynched. A neighbor discovered the deed the next morning when he passed by the house. She was found lying on the floor of her dwelling, surrounded by the scattered and torn clothing and the clothing of her bed. Tracks of many men's feet were found in the yard and in the house. No warrants have yet been issued, but a meeting of the citizens of the neighborhood was held Sunday and it was decided that prompt measures should be taken. Several persons are under suspicion and these parties will be arrested.

Negroes Again at Work.

NEW ORLEANS, March 16.—The scene along the levee is one of bustling activity. Nearly every ship in port which came for the purpose of receiving cargoes of cotton is now being loaded. The negroes have no fear. They are surrounded on all sides by soldiers and they feel contented. Gov. Foster stated that he would keep the military on the river until all signs of danger had passed.

Lived 90 Years to Suicide.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Mrs. Levi, 90 years old, of 1023 Noble avenue, Lake View, committed suicide by hanging Monday morning.

Floyd Township.

On Thursday last as Mrs. May Wilson was passing by the open fireplace her dress caught fire, and in an instant she was enveloped in the flames. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Baker, being present, tried to smother the fire with bed clothing, but failed to do so. She then ran out of the house and being exhausted, fell to the ground. Her brother at that time came with water and extinguished the flames. Directly she arose and was helped into the house; she was most terribly burned. She lingered until Saturday, when death relieved her sufferings. She was the wife of Harvey Wilson, of Floyd township. She was about 24 or 25 years of age, and had been married but a few months; was highly respected, and her untimely death will be deeply mourned by her many friends. The bereaved husband has the sympathy of the community.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Dun and Bradstreet Report a Better Feeling.

Adjournment of Congress and Cessation of the Gold Outflow Factors in Bringing It About—Improved Demand for Goods Anticipated.

NEW YORK, March 9.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"Congressional adjournment, and proof that though the rate of exchange rises to and even above the shipping point, gold does not go out, have produced a much better feeling. Prices do not improve, and there is on the whole no gain, but some loss in wages while strikes of 15,000 coal miners near Pittsburgh and several thousand building-workers here, besides strikes in ten or twelve textile and iron establishments, further lessen purchasing power for the time. But anticipation of improved demand for goods is general, and many are manufacturing beyond present needs on the strength of it. Fears of financial disorders no longer retard, though the redemptive rise of the dollar has averaged $221.000 per day for the month, but the fact that only $302,704 in gold has been exported since February 2, against $26,532,030 in January, strengthens the impression that further imports will somehow be prevented.

Wheat and Corn.

"Wheat has risen three-eighths of a cent because of rumored injury to growing grain in some states. Stocks in sight are numerous and western accounts make the stock of wheat in farmers' hands very large. Corn has declined a quarter, though the receipts are not half of last year's, with exports insignificant. Pork, lard and hogs are a shade higher, and beef has advanced to the highest point since July.

The Iron Industry.

"Three causes help the iron industry for the time—expectation of another great strike at coke works, reports that Bessemer lake ore will advance, and a moderate increase in demand for products. The increase in demand, is on the whole small, much of it due to new building throughout the country and some to better orders for sheets and wire nails, while wire rods and plates are in fair demand, but prices have not advanced.

"Strikes to resist reduction of wages in several textile works and reductions effected in some others by no means contradict the accounts that the mills are receiving somewhat better orders. Prices of goods are very low, and print cloths have fallen to 2.44 cents below any former record.

Boots and Shoes.

"The market for boots and shoes is still unsatisfactory, most jobbers holding that it is not possible to sell at an advance, and the slack demand for grades in which no advance is asked supports them, but somewhat more orders have been given this week at prices asked, enabling some factories to resume in part.

Failure Record.

"Liabilities of failures in February amount to $11,250,122, against $17,805,070 last year, $3,619,782 being in manufacturing, against $9,109,782 last year, and $6,924,042 in trading, against $8,237,027 last year. Failures for the week have been 234 in the United States against 245 last year, and 58 in Canada against 39 last year.

Bradstreet's View.

Bradstreet's says:

"The general business situation shows more improvement. From several centers this is declared due in part to the adjournment of congress and to some extent to better weather. Gains are shown in improved demand for lumber and other building materials and in receipts of larger orders for structural iron and steel, together with the absorption of available stocks of Bessemer pig-iron. Reports of a larger volume of trade at western and northwestern centers are more numerous, drygoods and groceries being in better distribution at Cleveland, gains being reported at Cincinnati, and there being a fair volume of business with an improved outlook at Detroit. Louisville maintains the previously declared volume of sales, while at Chicago the feeling is more hopeful, as a large number of cut-of-town buyers are making purchases in excess of a year ago. Relatively the greatest improvement is reported from St. Louis, there having been an improvement in sales of millinery, hats, dry goods and hardware equal to 30 per cent. Kansas city, Milwaukee and St. Paul each report fairly satisfactory sales, but while the situation is regarded more hopefully at other northwestern points, business is not reported improved at Omaha, Des Moines, Minneapolis or Duluth. On the Pacific coast the tendency is to improvement."

Death of a Heavyweight.

CLINTON, Mo., March 13.—W. C. Cashman, aged about 60 years, the largest man in Henry county, is dead. He had served twelve years as justice of the peace in this city. He was a volunteer in the union army during the rebellion. He weighed 425 pounds only a few months ago.

Adjourned in a Row.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 12.—The legislature adjourned sine die last night after a desperate fight over an attempt, which was successful, to prevent the delivery of a veto message. Several of the members were badly injured in the fracas.

Robbers Steal the Safe.

GUTHRIE, O. T., March 13.—At Stringtown robbers entered the store kept by M. Pounda, and, loading the safe on a pair of trucks secured at the depot, hauled it several miles into the country and blew it open with dynamite. They secured about $150.

Liable to Taxation.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The treasury officials say that dividends received by a resident of the United States from corporations, foreign or otherwise, doing business wholly without the United States, are liable to the income tax.

Treasury Statistics.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The treasury condition for the first third of March shows that receipts aggregated $9,225,000 and the expenditures $11,354,000, or an excess of the expenditures over receipts of $2,029,000.

Murderers Shot Down.

WALSHBERG, Col., March 13.—Nine Italians, charged with murdering Deputy Sheriff Dixon, were shot dead by American miners in this district, and a race war was reported to be in progress.

Died from Fright.

DECATUR, Ill., March 11.—During a small fire in a dry goods store Mrs. C. P. Thatcher, aged 56, well known in society, became so badly frightened that she died in a few hours.

A Miller Assigns.

WAPAKONETA, O., March 13.—Christ Fisher, the oldest miller in northwestern Ohio, assigned for the benefit of his creditors. The liabilities are $30,000 and assets $20,000.

Miners Resume Work.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 13.—Miners in this Pittsburgh district were successful in their strike for an advance in the scale and all but 6,000 have resumed work.

NATIONALITY IN EGG EATING.

Curious Racial Characteristics Noted in New York Restaurants.

The philosopher who is to discover the ponderability of a man's "gray matter" by the way in which he eats boiled eggs is not yet risen among us, but it only requires the ordinary powers of observation and a moderate acquaintance with the restaurants of New York, says the Sun of that city, to discover that there are some very curious and clear indications of a man's nationality to be gathered from watching the way in which he performs this function.

To an Englishman, it will be seen, there is but one way in which to eat boiled eggs, and all other ways are heathenish and an abomination. It is necessary, in the first place, that his eggs be medium boiled—three and a half minutes is the standard, tower-marked time—and then brought to table in a napkin, with bread and butter, spoon, pepper and salt, and an egg cup. Not one of those heavy, partitioned things, of thick iron stoneware, with a goblet-like arrangement at one end and a smaller depression at the other, but a delicate little article of white china, with a plain gold band around the edge, a narrow band it should be, or, perhaps, a little spray of light tinted flowers painted on the sides. Into this cup of comfort the egg slides deeply, just leaving a sufficient amount of shell above the rim to be removed, and to remove this shell there is but one true method of procedure. The shell must be daintily chipped with the spoon, and the fragments must be removed with the same utensil. There are some people who brutally cut off the top of the egg with a knife and plunge the spoon at once in medias res, but these are generally "persons," and are by no means representative of the true and insular art of egg eating. It is allowable, under certain conditions, to use the fingers to remove the broken fragments of the chipped shell, but the use cannot be commended as good form.

ABOUT CUT GLASS.

The Kind That Is in Vogue and How to Take Care of It.

Imported cut glass is now rivaled by the American production at a price which, though high, is considerably less than the foreign. Owing to the great amount of work required in cutting and polishing and the large percentage of breakage while in the hands of the workmen cut glass must always be valuable. Once, while watching the process at an American factory which turns out some of the finest in the world, I saw a salad bowl break just as it was receiving its final touches, and this without any fault of the artisan. On the piece had already been expended enough work to bring the value of the article up to forty-five dollars. Of course, the labor was totally lost.

The two finest kinds of glass, Bohemian and Venetian, are named from the countries in which their manufacture has reached a high degree of perfection. In the Venetian the beauty consists in the delicacy of the material and form. Its production requires both technical and artistic skill in glass blowing, while the Bohemian is distinguished by richness of ornamentation through polishing and engraving.

After the rivalry of England in adding a mixture of lead to flint glass, by means of which was produced a substance superior in brilliance and transparency to the Bohemians, the continental workers set to work to regain their supremacy. This they did by discovering how to make colored glass, or rather by rediscovering the old process and popularizing it. As a result we have to-day the Bohemian and Carlsbad glass, which is beautiful, though sometimes made gaudy by ornamentation of so-called "jewels"—that is, imitation of pearls, rubies, emeralds and garnets in colored glass. The result is often a brilliant melody that will hardly bear inspection.

LOVE A LA CHINOISE.

One Period in a Chinese Girl's Life When She Is Praised.

The following letter was written by a Chinese in China, who desired the daughter of a neighbor as a wife for his son:

"On my knees I beg you not to despise this cold and common request, but listen to the words of the matrimonial agent and give your honorable daughter to my slave of a son so that the pair, bound by silken threads, may have the greatest joy. In the beautiful spring-time I shall offer wedding presents and give a couple of geese, and let us hope for a long and continuous fortune and look forward through endless generations to the fulfillment of genuine love. May they sing of plenty and have every joy. On my knees I beg you to consider my proposal favorably and throw the mirror-like glance of your eyes on these lines."

Women with Mustaches.

One of the old fogies who spend their days compiling disagreeable statistics says that mustaches are more common among women now than formerly, and that fully eight per cent. of the women are thus adorned. This is nonsense. Probably this curmudgeon's eyebrows are so thick and overhanging that everything he sees appears to have whiskers.

In the countries of the Latin race—Italy, France and Spain—women with mustaches are plentiful enough. There is the queen of Spain, for one. She does not mind it, for women with downy lips are admired in those parts of the world. Among nations of the Teutonic race, on the contrary, there is a squeamish distaste for them, probably because they are so rare. Women in England are not usurping mustaches along with other institutions which man has surrendered to or divided with them.

WANT WHAT THEY CAN'T GET.

How a Certain Little Human Weakness Affects the Furniture Trade.

"John," said a furniture salesman, the other day, to the mover whom he had summoned, "this bedroom set is sold, but it is not to be delivered just yet. Move it out of the salesroom at once and store it somewhere until I want it."

"What's the use of moving it until you send it up to me?" asked the purchaser, ftdly. "Why don't you leave it where it is?"

The salesman, says a New York exchange, uttered a queer little laugh and said:

"It is evident that you were never in the furniture business, or you would not ask that question. If I should mark that set 'sold' and leave it here in the salesroom in plain sight it would probably lose us several good sales."

"How so?" asked the purchaser, with an unbelieving look.

"It illustrates a universal weakness of human nature," laughed the salesman. "Everybody wants what he can't get, and there is nothing quite so attractive to the average buyer as a piece of furniture that somebody else has bought before he came around. If I left that bedroom set out marked 'sold' half a dozen persons would say before night that it was exactly the set they wanted, and when they heard there were no duplicates they would fuss around enviously and nothing else in the establishment would satisfy them."

"Eventually they would go off discontentedly and buy elsewhere, though the chances are that if there were no 'sold' tag on the set none of them would give it more than a passing glance, while a fair proportion of them would purchase other sets. It is a little human weakness, that is all."

So arises one of the tricks of the trade. When a dealer sells a piece of furniture of which he has no duplicates he hustles it out of the salesroom as quickly as he can, lest it lose him other trade. But when he sells a piece of furniture of which he has duplicates he puts a big "sold" tag on it and leaves it in open sight as long as possible for a bait to others.

MERCHANTS AND CRAFT GUILDS

A Sort of Trades Union That Existed in the Twelfth Century.

During the twelfth century merchant guilds arose in all the towns of importance in England, and in the next century a further development of town life took place in the rise of craft guilds. These associations were composed of the artisans engaged in a certain industry in a particular town. By the growth of population, it is evident that when the merchant guilds had attained their first century there would be a considerable number of persons dwelling in the town who would not be eligible to membership of the guild either as landholders or as the heirs of guildsmen. Many of these would be skilled in some pursuit or calling; and naturally they would adopt the best means of securing their rights and protecting their interests by taking common action against the rest of the community.

The earliest craft guilds were those of the weavers and fullers of woolen cloth, says a writer in the Westminster Review. The guild of bakers is nearly as old, and that of the leather dressers, or corversars, dates from about the same period. At first there was a struggle between the merchant guilds and the craft guilds, as the one body naturally strove to retain its monopoly of the government of the town and the other endeavored to share in its municipal privileges. But the circumstances of the time were such as to quickly unite the two bodies in a common resistance to the tyranny of the sovereign power, or of the great feudal lords. In turn, the monarch found it good policy to foster the towns, both with the object of developing their wealth, and so of acquiring a source of revenue for himself, as well as of bringing into existence a factor to counterbalance the overgrown power of the nobles.

A FIGHT TO THE DEATH.

How Two Warriors in the Interior of Africa Settled Their Love Affairs.

Even in the interior of South Africa jealousy will induce men to fight. If two Matabele warriors offer the same number of cows to the father of a belle for her possession, arms are resorted to to decide the superiority of one or the other, and one of the combatants is usually killed in the contest. One of Maj. von Wissmann's officers accidentally witnessed such a duel and described it as follows:

"Toward sundown while resting near an immense boulder of the 'Ingogo drift' we were suddenly disturbed from sleep by yelling and a noise of clashing arms. Looking up I saw three Zulus jumping around and belaboring each other with thin sticks. I asked my servant Tom what was the matter. He replied this was a duel for a woman. Upon sign of the umpire, who watched the fray, motionless, the sticks were changed for clubs, and another set-to with this formidable weapon followed. Suddenly another sign was given, the clubs were thrown away and both ran in different directions. About thirty yards from the former position both turned and lifted the assagai, throwing them at each other. One of the Zulus had approached our hiding place, behind the boulder, so that I could almost touch him. Just as he lifted his spear for a second throw his adversary's assagai hit him in the breast. Without a sound he collapsed. The other—the victor—returned to the kraal to fetch the woman, now his."

Ship Launching in Japan.

The Japanese apply one of their many "pretty ways" to the launching of ships. They use no wine. They hang over the ship's prow a large pasteboard cage full of birds, and the moment the ship is afloat a man pulls a string, the cage opens and the birds fly away, making the air alive with music and the whirr of wings. The idea is that the birds welcome the ship as she begins her career as a thing of life.

MAN AND BEAR.

An Exciting Episode in Which Bruin Was Greatly Surprised.

Human Ingenuity Was Superior to Brute Instinct and the Man Escaped Being Devoured by the Bear.

Of all branches of railway engineering there is none which brings the officer into closer contact with a hard-working lot of men than the maintenance of way work. Sometimes there are comical features even in this department, and one of these was recently told to a writer for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat by a well-known engineer, who hides his real name under the pseudonym of Jerry Sullivan. It is a tale of one Tim, a track walker, who came in late one night and reported to the other occupants of the bunkhouse that he had been delayed by an extraordinary encounter with a bear. "Near the end of the section," said Tim, "close to the old tie camp, I was comin' along about half past three o'clock, and just after crossin' that little bridge I heard a nize of sumthin' rustlin' in the bushes down at the bottom of the dump, and thinkin' it was a rabbit I fired a rock down into 'em, and in a second there was a terrible slashin' around in thim bushes, and I see a big cinnamon bear come out sneezin' and rubbin' his nose, and thin, before I rightly come to me sines, the bear seen me and up the dump he come. Well, I started down the track as tight as I could go, but I hadn't went two telegraph poles until I look back and see the bear still comin' and gwin' on me every jump. So I dropped me adze and rinch and stretched myself for all I was worth. But it was no use, the bear was still gainin', and I was wonderin' what on airth I was goin' to do, when I see the iron pipe under the track near the out, and I made for that and went in just clear, when the bear jammed his head in at the end. But he was too big to go in, and he couldn't reach me, and so he pawed around and snorted and bit the end of the pipe, and tried first one side and thin the other. But I was safe, and I lied there and panted and blessed the man that invented iron pipe.

"Well, I thought the bear would go away after awhile, but he didn't; he stayed right there, wid his head in first wan ind of the pipe and thin the other, and when he came round to the upper ind I wished I had held on to the rinch so I could hit him a belt over the nose. After bein' in there over two hours I begin gittin' cold, and I thought I'd try smokin' him out. So I managed to light me pipe, and thin I smoked for all I knew how, but the bear still kept his head in the hole, and I crawled up closer and blew the smoke right in his face. He snorted a little, but wouldn't back out, and seemed to be gettin' madder all the time. Thin, when I was nadder froze to death, I happened to think of the stick of giant powder in me pocket, and, thinks I: 'Now I'll settle your hash.' So I puts a fuse in the stick of giant, and crawls up and threw it right under the bear's head, and thin touched off the fuse and backed down to the other ind of the pipe. I guess that bear thought I was going to run away, for he run across the track to the other ind; thin, when I crawled back to get me feet out of his reach he crossed back again and stuck his head and neck into the pipe just as the giant went off. Widout thinkin', I had made a big cannon out of the water pipe, and when it went off I was fired out and landed in the middle of the river and was nearly drowned before I knew just where I was at. But I finally struck the other bank and got out and went up to the station and flagged the passenger and rode home. After climbin' up the bank I looked back and saw smoke comin' out of the lower ind of the pipe and the bear still lookin' at the upper ind and tryin' to see phwat in blazes had happened."

Funeral Honors for a Dog.

"Black," the beloved dog of an American lady and gentleman living at Vauresson, outside of Paris, during the summer, having died recently was buried, says a Paris letter, with the full funeral honors usually accorded to human beings. The canine pet was placed in two caskets—one of oak, the other leaden—was then conveyed in a hearse covered with flowers to Vauresson and there buried. The funeral was followed by the Americans and their friends, all the mourners being in carriages. A monument, which cost sixty pounds sterling, was erected to the memory of the lost favorite. The expenses of the caskets, the funeral, the tomb and the memorial amounted to one hundred pounds sterling. The undertaker who carried out the order was rather puzzled at first, and mentioned the matter to a police commissary, who advised him to get a death certificate of the dog signed by two witnesses. This counsel was followed by the Pompes Funebres official, who was thus able to fulfill his contract without any fear of interference on the part of the representatives of the law.

Women in Russia.

Americans who have exercised themselves about the restricted freedom of persons living in Russia will naturally be surprised to learn how much freedom and power women enjoy in the land of the czar. In some parts of Russia women are not only members of school boards, but also serve as principals of workhouses and poor guardians. For instance, in one small province last year there were forty-five women in office as superintendents of workhouses, one hundred and twenty-five as poor law guardians, and two hundred and eighty-three as members of school boards. In Finland the women do a great part of the work that in other countries is left to the men. Most of the oldest and best orchards there were planted and cared for by women, and the author and publisher of the first Finnish work on pomology was a woman. Throughout Finland women are regularly engaged in agricultural labor.

MAKING AN OCEAN CABLE.

A Vast Amount of Work Before It Can Be Laid in the Ocean.

The making of an ocean cable is a task involving no small amount of skill and mechanical ingenuity, and it is something to the credit of the first cable makers that their pattern has not greatly changed in thirty years. When the Commercial Cable company decided to lay a new Atlantic cable last year, the work was entrusted to the firm of Siemens Brothers, of Woolwich, London. As this firm has constructed no less than eight out of the eleven cables now linking Great Britain and the United States, says the New Science Review, its method of manufacture may be watched as typical of the best. The first care of a cable manufacturer is to secure the very best materials. The copper wire, which forms the heart and essential part of the cable, must be of the purest metal, since the purer the metal the higher its standard of conductivity will be. Every strand and every coil of wire that goes into the cable is expected to reach a certain standard; and to such a degree of excellence is the making of copper wire for electrical purposes brought nowadays that the material submitted is more frequently above that standard than below.

The single wires having passed the test for purity and conducting power, eleven similar strands are taken and spun into a slender rope in lengths of one mile. Gutta-percha insulation is then applied in sheets prepared from the raw material as it comes to hand from Singapore and other Malay ports. These sheets are wrapped by experienced hands so firmly and smoothly round the wire that not an air bubble can remain between the copper and its insulator. The "core" is then ready to be submitted to a galvanometer test, to ascertain whether the insulation is perfect, or as nearly perfect as that very elusive agent, electricity, will permit. That test having been satisfactorily passed, a workman, whose sole business is to attend to the joining of the lengths of cable, splices the ends of the mile lengths. Again the insulation test is applied. The galvanometer indicating no very appreciable loss of electricity, even under the strain of an alternating current of 5,000 volts, the core is passed into the hands of the sheathers, whose care it is to surround the copper and gutta-percha with a more substantial protective covering before they are submitted to the rough action of the sea. And now the weight and size of the cable become appreciable. Already each mile length has in it some 500 pounds of pure copper and 340 pounds of pure gutta-percha. Over this is a spun coat of jute yarn weighing nearly 600 pounds to the mile. Then the cable is made the center of a twisted sheath of steel wires of the stoutest kind, averaging more than 4,000 pounds to the mile. And finally a compound of tar is laid over the whole, which brings its own weight of 800 pounds to the mile. After the tar is applied the cable is coiled and left to soak in tanks of water until such time as the cable ship shall be ready to lay it in its last resting place. Such a cable as this is made at the rate of fifty to fifty-five miles per twenty-four hours.

EFFECTS OF SUGAR.

Said by Scientists to Be Beneficial to the Physical System.

There are certain medical authorities who have for a long time been arguing in favor of a more general use of sugar as an article of diet. They claim that a liberal use of sugar increases the power of resisting fatigue, and enables the individual to perform much more labor than is possible without it. A report made to the Royal Society of England shows the influence of sugar in this direction. As an experiment, a laboring man fasted one day, taking nothing but water. His conditions, strength, fatigue and labor performed were carefully noted. On another day, five hundred grains of sugar were added to the water, and the same account was taken of the man's physical state. It was found that the sugar increased the muscular strength about 70 per cent., and greatly prolonged the period before fatigue was noticeable. In another experiment, sugar added to the food was observed to produce a surprising increase in muscular energy; 200 grams with a meal gave a maximum of 59 per cent. more strength than was discoverable in its absence, and 250 grams of sugar to a meal greatly increased the resistance against weariness, and enabled the man to perform, without undue exertion, an average of 12 per cent. more work than he was able to do without it. There is a growing opinion among the best scientific authorities that the craving of some persons and almost all children for sugar is not only reasonable, but in direct accord with natural law. Pure sugar is not only wholesome but necessary, and when growing children crave it should never be denied them.

Life Saving on the Ice.

An English gentleman has invented a life saving apparatus for use on a lake on his own place which is so simple that one like it could easily be put on every sheet of water frequented by skaters. Two broad planks, about eight feet long, are placed on sled runners, and these are joined together by a rope fully twenty feet in length. A life preserver is fastened to the center of the rope, and in case of accident, two people, by throwing themselves on the planks, could easily steer them to the hole, one on either side, when the life preserver could be grasped by the one whose life is in danger.

How They Distinguished Their Flocks.

A little eastern town of Long Islands has still preserved among its town records the ear-marks of the cattle that were pastured in common upon the broad meadows down from Montauk point. Among the marks were the nick, the slope, the "L," the hole, the slit, the hollow, the "U" and the half penny. All corresponded pretty fairly to the names. An exactly similar device were the swan marks in Great Britain solemnly set down in the public records.

TWO BAD MEN.

A Brace of Wild Westerners Who Were Both Able Killers.

They Schemed for a Whole Afternoon to Get the Drop on Each Other Without Success—Pleasant Diversions of Gun Fighters.

"One of the things that strikes a tenderfoot with surprise," said a western land surveyor to the New York Sun man, "is the way the tough men in the far west, when they happen to run counter to men of their own kind, will refrain from shooting until one gets the drop on the other. So quick and ready are the shooting men of the real sort that when facing each other on guard neither one can fire so quickly that the other will not return the shot before falling. Thus it may happen that two bad men who have sworn death to each other may meet often without exchanging shots because neither one can catch the other unprepared. Take the case of Wild Bill and Jim Currie, for example. Both men of undoubted nerve and skill, they were enemies for years—by some accounts they exchanged shots once at long range—but they never pulled triggers on each other at close quarters, and when Bill was assassinated by a wretch years afterward at Deadwood it closed the feud.

"Clay Allison, the New Mexican dead shot and marksman, found one man who wasn't afraid to stand up to him and was just as quick with his gun as himself. That man was Mace Bowman, some time a deputy sheriff of Colfax county. They spent a whole afternoon together, each trying to get the drop on the other, but neither one could accomplish it. It was a performance, though, of a kind to make an inexperienced man shiver. There was bad blood between them, and this afternoon when they met in Lambert's barroom and got to drinking the enmity began to rankle. It was perfectly understood between them that if either one got the drop on the other, the slower man would die, and this being agreed on both men maneuvered for an opening. Facing each other with such pleasant intentions they laughed and joked and drank together, all the time watching each other like cats. As a diversion in the proceeding they would lay their pistols, the barrels crossing, on the bar counter, step back to the other side of the room, and then, at an agreed signal, make a rush for the pistols. But neither could seize his weapon quickly enough to get the advantage of the other.

"Once as they were taking a drink together Bowman, with his whisky half way to his lips, suddenly smashed the glass to the counter and drew his pistol. But as it came up Allison's revolver met it half way. The men were looking into each other's eyes, and a sign in either's that a trigger was to be pulled would have meant the death of both men, which was more killing than either one wanted.

"This dalliance with death went on through the afternoon, until at last, at the coming of evening, the two men, becoming savage, declared that they would bring the duel to an end. They cleared the room of spectators, and had already taken their places in corners diagonally opposite to begin shooting, when W. R. Morley, of Cimarron, a strong friend of both men, rushed in between them at the risk of his life, and by expostulations and entreaties managed to get them off the idea of the duel and mutually to agree to separate without further trouble. So the two contestants backed out of the room at opposite doors and rode out of town different ways, saving an encounter which would almost certainly have resulted in the death of both."

HEROISM OF A LUMBERMAN.

Carrying a Wounded Comrade Forty Miles Through Cold and Snow.

A young man, Henry Brault, a resident of Peterboro, Ont., recently performed an act of heroism, actuated by friendship, which is worthy of record among the heroic deeds of heroic men of any age. The Manchester Union says that Brault and another young man, John Jamieson, were at work in the wild Madawaska region for the St. Anthony Lumber company. Jamieson met with a severe accident which rendered him delirious, and Brault started with him for civilization, where surgical treatment could be had. They had traveled on foot but a few hundred yards when Jamieson's strength gave out and he became helpless. Brault determined to save his companion if in his power, shouldered the invalid and started on his long, cold tramp of some forty miles to the nearest railroad. Without a moment's sleep, and bearing, besides his human burden, a pack of provisions, Brault continued his journey for four days and nights, through cold and snow, until finally, almost as helpless from exhaustion and fatigue as his friend was from illness, he had the supreme satisfaction of reaching the end of his journey and placing Jamieson where he was able to be properly treated. Such a feat of endurance seems almost incredible, and only a seasoned woodsman, inured to hardship, could have accomplished it; and among those capable of it it is rare to find so striking an example of disinterested friendship, even when a human life is at stake. Whatever his station in life may be, young Brault deserves to rank among nature's noblemen.

All Head and Mouth.

There are many curious forms among the fishes known to inhabit the very deepest portions of the deep sea, but there are few such unique specimens as that recently reported to the Berlin institute from the coast of Morocco. It was brought up from a depth of one and one-half miles and was a wonder to behold. The creature was only about twenty-nine inches long, but fully four-fifths of its entire length was head and mouth. It is estimated that if the body had been severed just behind the hinges of the jaw ten such "bodies" could have been stowed away in its great pouch-like stomach.

City Engineer Throop has gotten out his venture—"Greencastle City Directory." It contains much that is of value to the people in locating residences, business rooms, etc., gives a church, secret society, fire alarm directory, and also a business gazetteer and directory of the county. Its compilation and preparation represents a vast amount of labor, and it is hoped that the sales will be commensurate therewith.

A Martinsville newspaper gives currency to a hidden treasure story, in which Harrison Tinscher is interested, as follows: "Three young men have been going out night after night, and a number of citizens concluded to follow them and penetrate the mystery of their journeyings. Accordingly the young men were 'shadowed.' The scene was about one and a half miles west of Eminence, on the farm of Mrs. Harrison Tinscher, nee Staley, where the shadowing party found a hole in the ground, on the bottom of which was the imprint, apparently, of an iron kettle. It is evident that the young men had loosely covered up their find, and, conjecturing that they were watched, had hastily lifted out the pot and made good their escape from prying eyes. What the vessel contained is unknown except to the young men who made the find. They had been digging in and around the spot, it is supposed, for several nights. There are wild stories afloat of rich discoveries of shining gold."

Miss Lou Rader has returned from Spencer.

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Thomas Abrams and Mrs. D. W. Riggs gave an afternoon reception, assisted by Mesdames H. S. Renick, Jas. Stone, A. H. Morris, Chas. Meltzer, E. G. Fry, J. T. Allen and James Riggs, which was attended by a large number of invited lady guests. The parlors were handsomely and profusely decorated with La France roses, carnations, palms, etc., and the dining room was garnished with daffodils and palms. Dainty refreshments were served and the affair was a great social success.

The gentlemen having in charge the affairs of the Greencastle Manufacturing Company announce that work will begin on the buildings for the concern early in April, if in the meantime the necessary additional stock is subscribed for. The managers wish to place at least $10,000 in stock subscriptions, and some $6,000 of this amount has already been taken. It seems that no especial effort should be necessary to secure subscriptions for this balance of $4,000 in stock, when the facts in regard to the possible profits of the concern are taken into consideration.

Under the new fishing law, which by the way, was fathered, mothered, nurtured and made strong enough to pass triumphantly through the late legislature by the Greencastle Fishing Club, which is not named in the City Directory, it is unlawful to seine, gig, spear, hook or catch fish in Indiana waters between April 1 and June 15 of each year.

The desire for mutual improvement and the kind invitation of the host and hostess gathered a large number of lady and gentlemen guests at the elegant residence of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Abrams, on last Wednesday night, from 8 to 11 p.m. The occasion was one that all sought to improve by taking advantage of the opportunity for mutual improvement, and all were most fortunate in the happy results of their efforts. The hostess was assisted by Mesdames H. S. Renick, E. B. Evans, Alex. Lockridge, and Misses Nellie Hammond, Anna Stone, Edith Morris and Pearl Meltzer. The guests, on arriving, were given a series of instructions, in which the gentlemen and ladies were told to talk politics, gossip, woman's rights, sociology, etc., and after time thus spent a series of conundrums were proposed for each to answer one way or 't'other. The prize winners in this contest were Miss Lillian Southard, Dr. Lammers and James T. Allen—the latter two drew straws to settle their tie, and Mr. Allen won; the prizes were to Miss Southard a handsome vase; to Mr. Allen a pretty paper knife, and Hon. S. A. Hays made the presentation speeches on the occasion. During the evening the enjoyment of the guests was enhanced by recitations by Miss Rose Joslin and Marie Allen, and a violin solo by Miss Mollie Frank. Refreshments were daintily served during the evening. The parlors, dining room, etc., were beautifully garnished with cut flowers and tropical plants, and every accessory necessary to the enjoyment of such a social occasion was at hand, hence host, hostess and guests were pleased and happy.

City Schools and Their Work.

The yearly enrollment in the public schools is now 818, the monthly enrollment 744, the average attendance 688.5 or 94.1 per cent. The number not absent nor tardy 343, or 45.3 per cent; the cases of tardiness 31 or 2.2 per cent. This is the best record of tardiness for nearly eight years, perhaps much longer, for I have records only that far back. Some special reports by rooms are as follows:

Percent of attendance: Miss Alspaugh 98.6, Miss Jones 97.7, Miss Jordan 96.8, Miss McCoy 95.7, Miss Black 95.1, Miss Hammond 94.5, Miss Besor 91.2. Percent not absent nor tardy: Miss Jordan 61.3, Miss Miller 57.4, Miss Jones 56.6, Miss Alspaugh 55.8, Miss McCoy 54.5, Miss Black 51.8, Miss Adams 50.9, Miss Miller 47.7, Miss Miller 47.6, Miss Stone 47.4, Miss Ragan 47.4, high school 95.9. The year thus far has been a very satisfactory one. Work has been of a high order, discipline has been comparatively easy and pupils seem happy in their work. The ideal thought is to make the school as delightful and as free as the best home, and to bring into the life of the pupils such refining and elevating influences as shall make life glad and beautiful to them. And all this can be done when we learn how and the people understand the work of the school, without lessening the true force of discipline in the school. True discipline is not force, but a willing compliance with what is known to be just and right. Parents will visit the schools more that they may better understand the work done.

Greencastle has a new literary club, made up of young men, and they expect to do work creditable to their organization. The members are Bennett Allen, Ed. Black, Earl Cosner, Alex. Black, Arch Price, Clayton Kelly, Fred Ogg, and others, and the regular meetings are to be held once a month.

On Wednesday Dr. Poole's driving horse got away from him, at Oakalla, and ran mad race, against time, towards this city. The doctor was just ready to get in the buggy when the horse started, but the animal got away without him. The buggy was smashed all to pieces, and scattered along the road, with medicine cases, etc., for miles, but the horse was not seriously injured.

The Loriet Club will give their annual concert on Friday evening, March 23, at 8 o'clock.

Elder Morris will preach Sunday morning on "The Christian Church—How It Looks to a Minister of Another Religious Body." In the evening his subject will be "The Terms of Final Salvation." Public cordially invited. Services in G. A. R. Hall. Sunday school at 9:15 a.m.; Y. P. S. C. E. at 6 p.m.

A Big Show Coming

As will be seen by our advertisements, the great Yankee drama of "Si Plunkard" is to be presented at the Opera House, Thursday, March 28. This is one of the most laughable plays ever put on stage, but at the same time it has a very interesting plot. It is presented by a company with the famous comedian, J. C. Lewis, in the title role. The orchestra is a large and very fine one, in fact everything connected with the show is first-class. The prices of admission are low, so that there should be a packed house on the occasion. The press of this and other cities speak in the highest terms of the show.
